On the Modern Cuſtom of divining by COFFEE-GROUNDS.

GOING to viſit a Lady, with whom I am very intimate, I enter'd her Parlour unexpectedly, and ſurpriz'd her and her Company, in cloſe Cabal over the Tea-Table. The Figures of the Groupe were ſo odly circumſtanc'd, and had ſuch whimſical Emotions in their Faces, that I can't think it an improper Subject for the facetious Pencil of Mr. Hogarth, or a Scene of Humour unfit for general Entertainment. At the upper End of the Table ſat a Perſon, in a black Hood and a ſhort red Cloak, as if in too great a Hurry to make a long Viſit, and her Time of too great Conſequence to be triſled away: She ſeem'd to be a Woman of about thirty, and as I imagin'd, by a good Deal of Tongue, and as much Intelligence, had qualified herſelf to be a Tire-Woman; to which ſhe added the Secret of divining by Coffee-Grounds, to make her Character compleat. She was then in full Inſpiration, and held the enchanted Cup with as much Solemnity, as if 'twas the Book of Fate; and every Atom of the Coffee, was the Character of Futurity. On her right Hand ſat a blooming young Lady, with her Mouth half open, and her Eye fix'd in profound Attention; who, by a roſy Bluſh on her Cheek, and the gentle Panting of her Boſom, ſeem'd concern'd in the Prediction, and depended on the promis'd Husband at the Fortnight's End, as ſurely, as if the Terms were agreed on, and the Day appointed. At her left was plac'd a plump, jolly Widow in her Weed, who appear'd to be between 40 and 50, and had all the Life and Spirit in her Face of 25. She had got her Cup ready, and pulled the Propheteſs by the Sleeve, with an Air of Impatience, to examine it correctly, and ſave her the Perplexity of a Delay. She ſeem'd to think every Moment loſt, and every Husband allotted another, a Loſs to her. The Lady (my Acquaintance) has been married ſome Years, and to all Appearance very happily, and yet ſhe was contemplating her own Cup with as much Earneſtneſs, as if a Change was abſolutely neceſſary for a Compliment to her Beauty, and every Bar in the Way, an Obſtacle to her Happineſs. Juſt oppoſite ſtood her Woman, ready to ſeize the Sybil, as ſoon as ever ſhe was diſmiſs'd; and quite uneaſy 'till ſhe had the Opportunity of playing Bo-peep with Fortune, and ſtealing a Glance at to Morrow. Behind all, and in the Shade of a Curtain, ſtood the Footman, ſtifling a Laugh at the Farce that was acted before him, and archly ridiculing the Credulity that occaſion'd it. As ſoon as I came in, they all ſtarted in a Surprize. The Enchantreſs mov'd off abruptly, and the Scene ended in a Burſt of general Laughter.——When this was pretty well over, I ventur'd to inſinuate, I was not intirely unacquainted with the Myſtery: But, as I did not very well underſtand the Principles of their Divinations, I ſhould be glad to be inform'd.——The Widow immediately replied, with ſome Pertneſs, that ſhe believ'd the Queſtion was only deſign'd by Way of Ridicule: However, as ſhe had experienc'd the Truth in two Husbands already, ſhe would depend on't again for another.——Here my Acquaintance rejoin'd: Why look you, Sir, I know you are an Unbeliever; but I muſt tell you, that every Caſt of the Cup is a Picture of all one's Life to come: There are Billets to be ſeen in it ſo plain, that one can diſtinguiſh the very Hand that wrote them; there is Money, in juſt the Sum to a Farthing you are to receive; there are Preſents, with the very Colour of the Footman's Livery who brings them; there's your Friend deſcrib'd, with his Heart open before you; and your Enemy, with the Scheme of Miſchief he intends you in his Hand: Coquets ſee their Lovers paſs along in Succeſſion, like the Ghoſts in Macbeth; and Prudes, the very Maſque of their own Hypocriſy: Gameſters foreſee their ſucceſs at Play; Courtiers their Preferments; Maids their Husbands; Wives their Widow-hood; in ſhort, 'tis the Miniature of Life, as plain, as the Landſcape reflected thro' a Glaſs into a dark Chamber; and one muſt be blind, and ſenſeleſs, not to ſee and admire the Diſcovery.——Upon my Honour, Madam, (ſaid I) I did not imagine this Practice was of half the Importance. Futurity, I find, is as eaſily decypher'd, as a treaſonable Letter. I am of Opinion ſuch an Art as this, would be of ſome Service to a Stateſman; for inſtead of going to Council in the Morning, he need only examine the Coffee-Grounds, and all the Affairs of a whole Nation would appear before him at once. He would know all the Plots and Cabals of his Adverſaries; all the Intreagues of foreign Princes; and before the Arrival of a Courier, diſpatch his Anſwer to the Advices he was to bring. I'll become a Practitioner in this Study my ſelf, and make it the effectual Means of my Advancement.——O, dear Sir! replied the Lady eagerly, you can do nothing better: You may be ſure the Scheme is infallible.——I have but one Objection, Madam, ſaid I. If the Proſpect of Affairs ſhould be dark and gloomy, full of Miſchief and Misfortunes, would it be in my Power to prevent them? or muſt I ſit down contented with foreſeeing the Scheme before me, and ſubmit intirely to what is preordain'd by Fate?——Certainly, ſaid the Lady, our Buſineſs is only to foreſee, not alter or amend; that would be treſpaſſing too much on Providence, and you don't imagine I would hint at any Thing of that Nature.——And ſo, Madam (I return'd) I muſt only qualify myſelf, to anticipate a Miſery before it comes, and torment my Patron before his Time.——This is the Amount of our Curioſity, even if the Prediction was in our Power; and I fancy I ſhould make but an ill Compliment to any of my Friends, in giving them a View of that Sorrow, which Heaven in Mercy had conceal'd. I would not be too ſevere on a Practice you have encourag'd by your Example; but I have ſo much true Concern for your Welfare, as to diſſuade you from ſuch unwarrantable Enquiries.——Be contented with what you enjoy! be prepar'd to endure Evil when it comes, and depend on Providence for the reſt!——At this, the Widow roſe in Confuſion; Madam, ſays ſhe, I was at Church in the Morning; and 'tis never my Cuſtom to hear two Sermons in a Day. Had Mrs. Foreſight examin'd my Cup, I had been forewarn'd of this Misfortune, and had done my beſt to avoid it ſooner.

To the Right Honourable --------
The humble Petition of ---------.

Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioner has long and painfully attempted, purſuant to your Lordſhip's Order, to pay his Duty at you Honour's Levee; in which, as often as he had Money to bribe your Servants, he ſucceeded; and as often as he wanted, he has met with a moſt diſagreeable Repulſe:

That at this preſent Writing, your Petitioner labours under ſuch a Deficience, that excludes all Hope; having quite exhauſted his little Stock amongſt your Lordſhip's ſaid Domeſticks, tho' to very ſmall Purpoſe;

Your Lordſhip's Petitioner, therefore, humbly implores, that, in your tender Compaſſion to his hard Caſe, you will be pleas'd, either to order him to be admitted Gratis; or ſupply him with a Stock, to ſee your Servants for a gracious Admittance for the future.

And your Petitioner, as in Duty bound, &c.

SIR,

THE intolerable Inconveniencies, which all thoſe lie under, who are oblig'd to make Application to great Men in Office, from the Difficulty of Acceſs, without a Fellow-feeling with their Servants, are ſo honeſtly, as well as livelily ſet forth in the Petition above, that I can hardly believe, but you will agree with me its Publication may be of ſingular Service. The Truth is, the Scandal there hinted at is the more notorious for being general. Whether, by the Connivance, or the Examples of their Lords and Maſters, their Servants are ſo avariticuſly addicted, I ſhall not take upon me to determine: But this may be reaſonably concluded on, that a conſtant Repetition of the ſame vile Practice in the Servant, will very juſtly argue the Maſter very blind, or ſupine in his Domeſtick Concerns. To ſuch as are conſenting to the Folly (not to call it worſe, if there be any ſuch) I ſhould think no Satire can be ſevere enough to draw their Character. For what an Idea of our Nation muſt it give to any Foreigner, that Admiſſion to the Lord was not to be obtain'd without making Court to his Gentleman or Footman? On the other Hand, how muſt it touch a Man of Spirit to the Heart, to ſee the Arrogance of the meaneſt of ſuch mercenary Domeſticks in their haughty Interrogations, ſaucy Airs and ſurly Anſwers, till they ſee the Hand ready to bribe them into common good Manners? And yet, after all, if Mr. Footman or Porter prove an old Stager, I would lay odds on his Head, but he makes a thouſand dilatory Excuſes, to inhance the Value of what they are more than paid for. A Man may eaſily exchange his Money without, for Promiſes within, and only grow poorer by the Dependance.

Whoever he was, that firſt ſtarted that mean-ſpirited Maxim, never to give the Servant room to ſpeak ill of you to his Maſter, he ſeems to have had ſome Idea of the Evil here complain'd of; and to have experienc'd the Inconvenience he adviſes againſt. But tho' the Notion ſhould be allow'd juſt in Politicks, between Dependant and Servant; as to the Maſter, it is both mean and ſcandalous; and muſt argue him a Perſon of a ſhallow Underſtanding, as putting it in the Power of any of his Shoulder-knots, to retale his Honour at what Rate he pleaſes, and proſtitute it to every venal Bidder. It is like that fallacious Trafick at our common Auctions, where the Upholſterer advertiſes the Sale of ſuch a noble Lord's Houſhold Furniture; but claps into the Inventory Lumber of his own, that is a manifeſt Lampoon on the reſt of the Catalogue.

I ſhould rather chuſe to retort that poor-ſpirited Adage, with one of much greater Signification, to the Courtier-Lord; and which would ſettle all Matters in Queſtion between Attendant and Servant. Never to give the meaneſt Occaſion to call in Queſtion his Honour: or allow any under him ſuch Countenance, as to treat the Appearance of a Gentleman with ill Manners. I remember no very bad Method a certain Peer in a late Reign took, to avoid the Inconveniencies here all along hinted at. His Porter (and he always took Care to make Choice of one that could write and read) in a Book provided for that Purpoſe, enter'd the Names of all who came to wait on his Lord, which the next Morning was carry'd by his Gentleman to his Lordſhip; who, on view thereof, order'd Admiſſion to ſuch as he thought fit. But if there happen'd to be among them any, whoſe Affair he did not rightly comprehend, the ſame Gentleman received Orders to diſcourſe with them, and give his Lord a fuller Information. Once a ſaucy Servant, juſt entertain'd, endeavouring to hinder a Tradeſman's Name from being put on the Liſt, was, upon the Tradeſman's Complaint, diſcharg'd, and never could again be receiv'd into Favour. But to ſee the Difference of Men and Seaſons. I happen'd not many Weeks ſince, to attend a noble Lord's Levee, with whom I had Buſineſs of an independant Nature; and could not but bluſh at the Rudeneſs of his Porter to any Gentleman whatever. When I came out again (for the ſaucy Raſcal would not let him ſet Foot within Doors, notwithſtanding it rain'd) I was out of my common Road ſomewhat curious, and look'd about for the Party, who I found had fled to a Sort of Shelter hard by to wait his Lordſhip's coming out. But, how was I ſurpriz'd to find the Perſon ſo us'd! one, that, to my own Knowledge, had many and many a Time entertain'd the Maſter himſelf at his Table; nor ever let the meaneſt of his Servants, even on a mere How d'ye, go away from his Houſe without eating or drinking! I believe indeed the ſaucy Servant might know nothing of all this: But will that recommend the Underſtanding, or Humanity of the Maſter?

SIR,

THE following Poem was wrote originally in the Reign of the late King William, by Mr. Donne of Cambridge, and was afterwards inlarg'd by Mr. Motteaux.——'Tis full of fine Imaginations, and I believe will afford Entertainment to all, who have any Taſte for the Charms of Poetry.

I am, Sir, Yours, &c.

The PEN: A Poem. Inſcrib'd to Mr. Snell.

WILL the prevailing Genius of this Reign,
No Worthies ſhew but of the higheſt Strain?
What e'er behind Poſterity can claim
Muſt be a Blank, or Tranſcript ſtill the ſame.
Each Art, each Science we already find
Within the Compaſs of Man's mighty Mind:
He urges on unmeaſurably high,
Can all beneath the Firmaments deſcry,
And traces onwards tow'rds Infinity.
In all he does, the Original is ſhow'd;
We read his Extract, cannot miſs the God.
The Pen, the Pencil, and the Thought ſublime,
The Warmth of Fancy, and the Charms of Rhime
Muſt fix; they can no more Diſcov'ries find;
No Room for ought, but Wonders left behind.
Snell, Kneller, Dryden, fill the Mouth of Fame;
An ART is comprehended in a NAME.

Hail, ye great three! who have ſo nobly wrought!
The curious Pen, and the contriving Thought!
What Age, ſince Earth began her ſelf to rear,
And op'ning Clouds diſclos'd the World's great Heir,
Has taught the tow'ring Soul a nobler Height,
Or ſhew'd Mankind in a more glorious Light?
When was the charming Niceneſs of the Pen,
Till now by Snell inimitably ſeen?
I've ſeen him o'er the Virgin Paper trace
With ſuch a Swiftneſs, yet with ſuch a Grace;
So ſmooth, ſo fine the nimble Strokes did ſhew,
Like Trips of Fairies o'er the Morning Dew;
Or tranſient Swallows, when they lightly ſeem
To skim the Surface of the yielding Stream.
So Winter Starlings, riſing in a Cloud,
Shade ſubject Plains, and dusk the airy Road.
In various Figures wind, and as they fly,
Scheme a wing'd Alphabet along the Sky.
Long Time had Writing wore a formal Face,
Affecting Ornament, but wanting Grace.
The Scribes crept on, by one dull tedious Rule,
At leaſt, like Pedants, regularly dull.
Redoubling Strokes with Imitation curſt,
Oft with a Second they impair'd the Firſt.
——But happier Snell's commanding Pen appears,
Like darting Sun-Beams, or thoſe active S ars,
That ſtreak the Surface of the Midnight Skies,
And ev'n out-ſtrip the Glances of our Eyes.
With Judgment's Ken ſurvey the manly Page,
And own the Art is equal to the Age.
With Softneſs ſtrong, with Ornaments not vain,
Looſe with Proportion, and with Neatneſs plain:
Not ſwell'd, yet full; compleat in ev'ry Part,
And artful moſt, when leaſt affecting Art.
——Ye Britiſh Fair, ye Charmers born to bleſs,
Let the Pen's Graces all your own expreſs!
Let Snell's own Genius wait on your Command,
Let Senſe employ, and Beauty guide your Hand.
An artleſs Scrawl the bluſhing Scribler ſhames,
All ſhould be fair, that beauteous Woman frames.
Hail myſtick Art! which Men like Angels taught,
To ſpeak to Eyes, and paint unbody'd Thought!
Tho' Deaf, and Dumb; bleſt Skill, reliev'd by thee,
We make one Senſe perform the Task of three.
We ſee, we hear, we touch the Head and Heart,
And take, or give, what each but yields in part.
With the hard Laws of Diſtance we diſpenſe,
And without Sound, apart, commune in Senſe;
View, tho' confined; nay, rule this earthly Ball,
And travel o'er the wide expanded ALL.
Dead Letters, thus with living Notions fraught,
Prove to the Soul the Teleſcopes of Thought;
To mortal Life immortal Witneſs give;
And bid all Deeds and Titles laſt and live.
In ſcanty Life, Eternity we taſte;
View the firſt Ages, and inform the laſt.

N. B. The Letter ſign'd Theoſebius is receiv'd, and if the Author will oblige us with the Poem it mentions, the Length ſhall be no Bar to its Publication.

There being an extraordinary Demand of the laſt Regiſter, on Account of the following Rule, we have thought it adviſable to publiſh it again.

The RULE.

Multiply the Grots of the Price of a Mark Fine, by 28---Divide what comes out, by the Pence Sterling of the Price of an Ounce of Standard Silver, and you'll have the Grots Banco, that one Pound Sterling produces on Standard Silver in Bars ſo bought and ſold.

EXAMPLES.

Given---Standard Silver in Bars at 62 Pence per Ounce: Fine Silver at 24 Guilders 2 Stivers Banco per Mark fine.---Quere, how much Banco Money does one Pound Sterling produce?

The Grots of 24 Guilders 2 Stivers are 964. Theſe multiply'd by 28, make 26992. Theſe divided by 62 Pence, bring out 435 Grots $\frac{1}{4}$, or 36 Schellings 3 Grots $\frac{1}{4}$ Bank Money for one Pound Sterling. Again--Given -- Standard Silver in Bars at 65 Pence per Ounce: Fine Silver at 25 Guilders 11 Stivers Banco per Mark fine.----Quere, how much Banco Money does one Pound Sterling produce?

The Grots of 25 Guilders 11 Stivers are 1022. Theſe multiply'd by 28, make 28616. Theſe divided by 65 Pence, bring out 440 Grots $\frac{16}{65}$, or 36 Schellings 8 Grots $\frac{1}{4}$ Banco Money for one Pound Sterling.

Suppoſe the Exchange between Amſterdam and London at 34, 11, what Profit does there ariſe on Standard Silver at the given Prices in this Example?---To find which, 1761 (the quarter Grots of 36, 8 $\frac{1}{4}$) being multiply'd by 100, are 176100. Theſe divided by 1676 (the quarter Grots of 34, 11) bring out L. 105:01:05---that is L. 5:01:05 per Cent Profit, at the Prices above, viz.

Bought at 65 Pence.---Sold at 25 Guilders 11 Stivers Banco.---Returned by Exchange at 34, 11 per L. Sterling.

From Lynn Regis, in Norfolk, they write that laſt Week a Man was condemn'd there for the barbarous Murder of an old Woman.

Dublin, March 9. The Papiſts in this City are of late grown ſo inſolent, that if ſome extraordinary Meaſures are not taken to put a Stop to their Career, it is to be fear'd, they will greatly annoy his Majeſty's loyal Subjects: No later than Sunday laſt, we had two convincing Specimens of what they would be at: The Mob, which is for the moſt Part made up of Papiſts, inſulted the Gentlemen of our Univerſity at their coming out of the College, and mobb'd them through every Street to St. Patrick's Church; when they came there, they, to ſhew how little they reſpected the ſolemn Duties of the Day, inſtead of joining in Prayers with the Congregation, unanimouſly agreed to pour into the Church, Vollies of Imprecations and Pebble Stones: There were a great many of the Gentlemen wounded; and we hear, that the Provoſt, endeavouring to appeaſe the outrageous Fury of the Mob, was likewiſe very much hurt; in ſhort, if it had not been that a Detachment of the Standing Army, from the Main-Guard, came in a ſeaſonable Time, to defend thoſe Gentlemen from the Raſcally

Uſage of thoſe Reprobates, there would, in all Probability, have been a great deal of Bloodſhed.

The ſame Day, another Body of the like diſaffected People, who aſſembled in Oxmantown-Green, as they uſually do on Sabbath Days, inſulted and abuſed ſeveral of the Soldiers in our Barracks; and if thoſe Gentlemen had not thought it more prudent to withdraw than expoſe themſelves, we ſhould certainly have had a miſerable Scene of Death and Confuſion. We will not pretend to ſay, that theſe were Plots concerted to noſe the Government, but it looks a little like Diſreſpect and Sabbath-breaking.

Rob. &c. Several diſorderly Perſons apprehended on Sunday Night, were Yeſterday committed to Bridewell.——From Edenburgh, March 8. We are told, that on Friday before, a Party of Col. Handſide's Reg. brought into that City ſix ſturdy Highland Men, charg'd with Theft and other Crimes; who are all committed to cloſe Priſon.

We hear from the ſeveral Circuits, that the Act for the better Regulation of Juries paſſed laſt Seſſions, being put in Practice, meets with general Approbation (it taking up no more Time, than the Method of calling over the Jurors did) as it will effectually put a Stop to the vile Practice of corrupting Juries, and will prevent the illegal Exaction which the Bailiffs of Hundreds uſed towards the Freeholders to excuſe their Attendance; particularly we hear, that in the Oxford Circuit a Bailiff of one of the Hundreds of that County, being convicted of taking Money to excuſe the Attendance of ſome Freeholders, was fined for his firſt Offence 40*s.* for a ſecond Offence 5*l.* and for the third Offence 5*l.* which juſt Puniſhment, it is hoped, will deter others from ſuch illegal Practices.

A VIEW of the Depradations and Ravages committed by the SPANIARDS, on the BRITISH Trade and Navigation. Moſt humbly offer'd to the Conſideration of the PARLIAMENT of GREAT BRITAIN.

This tame beſeeching of rejected Peace?
Whence is it that the proud Iberian thus
Dares rouze to Wrath the Maſters of the Main?
Who told him that the big incumbent War
Would not, e'er this, have roll'd his trembling Ports
In Smoaky Ruin? —— Thomſon.
